APPLIES TO CAIRO.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal has the following concerning a subject of vital importance:

"Next Friday the census will close. Enumerators have only a few days more remaining in which to collect the names and information required by the federal law. Memphis people should not for a minute misconstrue the importance of this work. They should do all in their power to facilitate it. Many people make mistakes through ignorance. Others withhold their names wittingly and purposely. There is no excuse for them. There are none so ignorant that they can be excused in attempting subterfuge when called upon to answer a few simple questions.

"It should be remembered that each enumerator is a sworn deputy of the government. He is protected by the government. He represents the government. He is responsible to the government, and has authority to secure the indictment of all who decline to fill out the blanks as required by the census bureau.

"There is no logical reason for objecting to answer these questions. People of all classes should be glad of the opportunity and should assist in every possible way in order that the work may be rendered easier. The man who lives in Memphis, works in Memphis, makes his money here and fattens off of the local public, should be ashamed to make any effort to evade the responsibility which belongs to citizenship. Some make this an excuse for declining to submit their names. The man or woman who willfully refuses to cooperate by answering the questions asked should be dealt with severely. There is no sensible reason for such stubbornness. Only a few days more remain and those who have not been recorded or who are overlooked for some reason should notify Supervisor John Farley at once."

STORY OF "MARK TWAIN."

The story of the manner in which Samuel Langhorne Clemens got his pen name is well known, but it may not be inappropriate at this time to give it as the famous humorist tells it himself in his narrative of "Life on the Mississippi." As a boy at Hannibal, Mo., he developed a longing to be a steamboatman, and in fulfillment of this ambition he secured a position as "cub-pilot" on a small and somewhat rickety boat that bore the name of Paul Jones. After a brief apprenticeship on the Paul Jones young Clemens found a berth on a larger boat and began his real work as a pilot. His first experience at the wheel, after the boat had swung into the great river, he describes as follows:

"My imagination began to construct dangers out of nothing, and they multiplied faster than I could keep run of them. All at once I imagined I saw shoal water ahead. The wave of coward agony that then surged through me came near dislocating every joint in me. * * * Captain and mate sang out instantly and both together:

"Starboard lead there! And quick about it!"

This was another shock. I began to climb the wheel like a squirrel; but I would hardly get the boat started to port before I would see new dangers on that side. * * * Then came the leadman's sepulchral cry: "Dee-ep four!"

Deep four in a bottomless crossing! The terror of it took my breath away. "Ma-r-k three! Ma-r-k three! Quarterless-three! Half twain!"

This was frightful! I seized the bell ropes and stopped the engines. "Quarter twain! Quarter twain! Mark twain!"

My hands were in a nerveless flutter. I could not ring a bell intelligently with them. I flew to the speaking tube and shouted to the engineer:

"Oh, Ben, if you love me, back her! Quick Ben! Oh, back the immortal soul out of her!"

And then he turned to find the captain and other members of the crew laughing at him. They had played a joke on him, and it was with the memory of this incident as a river pilot fresh in his mind that he signed "Mark Twain" to his first written articles. "Mark Twain" meant two fathoms, a dangerously small depth of water for the boat on which the young pilot was serving.—Record-Herald.

CAIRO IN 1885

(Cairo Bulletin, published by E. A. Burnett.)

The city council was in a wangle after the city election, caused by Mayor Halliday's refusal to sign an ordinance abolishing the office of city comptroller, and reducing the salary of the city attorney to $25 a year. On the night of April 24th a third attempt was made to hold a meeting to canvass the return, but Aldermen Patier, Wood, Lancaster and Woodward withdrew from the meeting because the mayor's action was not satisfactory to them. They had voted for the ordinance on the score of economy. Mayor Halliday permitted the ordinance to become a law without his signature. Under the ordinance when published, appeared a note from the mayor giving his reasons for not signing it. First, it was passed too late to effect the salary of the newly elected city attorney. Second, "He did not favor abolishing the office of city comptroller, as that officer had saved more than his salary in collecting back special assessments alone, besides rendering other most efficient and necessary services to the city, etc."

On Monday, April 27th, Alexander and Safford lodges I. O. O. F. and their friends to the number of about 150, accompanied by the Cairo band, went to Charleston, Mo., where they joined with the lodge of that town in a celebration. Judge Bross was spokesman for the Cairo delegation and was also marshal of the day.

FACTS AND COMMENT

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

(By Retired Capitalist)

Graduates and Simple Life.
The young ladies of the high school graduating class are entitled to much credit for their resolution to give Cairo people a useful example of the simple life, a return to which in a general way would contribute much to the prosperity, moral improvement and solid happiness of the country. They propose to make their own gowns that will be worn at their graduation exercises, the material in them not to cost over $2.50 each. This is a long step in the right direction by the young ladies, as they leave school to go out into the world.

Labor and Wages.
The great employers of labor generally would have this country flooded with the most ignorant European and Asiatic laborers, to hold down wages and prevent strikes if the law permitted. As it is, they manage to evade the law to a large extent. The tariff protected employers want the supply of labor large, so they can hire at the lowest possible wages. This should now be apparent to all. What the intelligent laboring class should seek is more stringent law to prevent the importation of labor. They should procure a prohibitory tariff on foreign labor.

This does not quite jibe with the Socialist doctrine, which declares brotherhood of man, regardless of boundary line, dividing countries, and the application of which doctrine would bring the living level of American workers down to that of the same class in countries where wages are lowest. Socialist talk of government ownership of everything and co-operation is chimerical. The latter has been tried often and always proved a failure. There could be no practicable government ownership without bosses and a wage system, and there would be as much cause for strikes as there is now.

Isolation in Great City.
In every rank and every condition men and women find themselves more isolated in London than anywhere else.—Archbishop of Westminster.

Usefulness Imperative.
Unless what we do is useful, our glory is vain.—Phaedrus.

LEGAL DECISIONS

Cruel and Unusual Punishment.
In the case of State v. Ross, 104 Pacific Reporter, 596, it appeared that defendant was convicted of larceny of some $288.00 from funds of the state, and a fine in double that amount assessed in addition to a five year term in the penitentiary. Defendant was to stand committed till the fine should be paid; thus making a total imprisonment of more than 750 years in case he had to work it all out at the $2 per day allowed. Interest seems to have not been imposed, but it is worthy of note that, if it had been, accused would not only have been condemned to languish in the county jail through all eternity, but would have needed the daily allowance of a dozen fellow prisoners to keep from plunging further toward hopeless insolvency for all time to come. Fortunately, however, the Oregon Supreme Court held the punishment "cruel and unusual" notwithstanding it was within the maximum provided by statute.

A Royal Connoisseur.

James B. Laughlin, of Pittsburg recently discovered a hoax in his gallery and compelled a dealer to refund the $9,500 that had been paid for a $20 work of art.

"Mr. Laughlin, as this episode shows, is a connoisseur of no mean ability. At a recent dinner he pointed out brilliantly the limitations and the shallowness of 'court painters.' Then he laughed and said:

"A movement was on foot for the alliance of King Charles of Wurtemberg and the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia. An emissary of the Russian court came to the young king, laid certain proposals before him and submitted a portrait in oils of the royal lady.

"King Charles, after a close scrutiny, said:

"This portrait flatters overmuch. The eyes are too large and brilliant, the hair too abundant, the complexion too flower-like and the neck and arms too beautiful altogether."

He introduced.

"Really," said the Earl, "I am surprised anybody should think the President could get along with so small a tent as that. It is quite unsuitable, I assure you. I have traveled extensively in Africa and I feel sure he will be disappointed if he expects to find animals there with such strange cognomens as those introduced in this portrayal."

An old Irishman named Casey made a lot of money as a contractor and built a fine house for his child ren.

The sons and daughters were much ashamed of the pebbles father, and Casey was always kept in the rear of the house when they had a party or a reception. One day Casey died and there was a great to-do about it. The children had a fine coffin with lashings of flowers, and Casey was laid in state in the parlor.

That evening an old Irish woman who had known Casey when he was a laborer, came and asked to see the face of her dead friend. They conducted her to the parlor.

She walked up to the coffin, took a long look and said: "Faith, Casey, an' they've let ye into th' parlor at last."

"I am a student of rural humor," said George Bleistein, president of the Courier company, of Buffalo, and those, to my mind, are the gems of my collection!

"I met a farmer on his way to town up near my place in Livingston county, New York. 'Where are you going, Jim?' I asked him.

"I'm goin' to town to git drunk," Jim replied, 'and, gosh, how I dread it!'

"The other one was a horse trader. 'What's Bill laughing about?' I asked a farmer friend.

"He's just bought a horse."

"Well, what are you laughing about?"

"I told it to him."

Evidence Enough.

The landed proprietor purchased a carriage horse to match one he already possessed. A day or two later he asked his groom what he thought of the new arrival.

"Well, sir," said Sandy, "he's certainly a grand-looking horse, but he's a wee bit touchy 'f the temper."

"What makes you say that, Sandy?"

"Weel, he disna seem to tak' kindly to anybody, sir. In fact, he diana like me to gang inae his box to feed him even."

"Oh," lightly responded the horse's owner. "He hasn't settled down yet that's all. His surroundings are strange to him. I don't think there's anything wrong with his temper."

"I didna either at first sir," remarked Sandy, "but he kicked me clean out o' the box twice, an' when ye come to think about it that's sort o' convincin'!"—The Bits.

The Sabbath.

The change from the seventh to the first day of the week as a day of worship came with the change from Judaism to Christianity and commemorates the resurrection of Christ. For a time Jewish converts observed the Jewish Sabbath, but before the end of the apostolic period Sunday had thoroughly established itself as a day to be sanctified by rest from secular labor and public worship.

A New Disease.

A little girl one day came in the sitting room with a little sick chicken in her hand and said: "Do something for him quick. I am 'frail he's got the perria jercitis (appendicitis)."

From the Delineator.

Men and Boys.

The boys do lots of things that the grown people frown at, but inwardly applaud. One is when they clap and stamp for a delayed entertainment to begin. The older people are tired of waiting, but don't dare show it.—Atchison Globe.

Will Tattooed on Body.

A Mexican miser who died not long ago was found to have his will tattooed on his breast. It caused his heirs no end of bother, as the document had to be copied before the man could be buried.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"Women wouldn't have so much trouble with their men folks," says the Philosopher of Folly, "if they'd believe a little less of what they said before marriage, and a little more of what they say afterwards."

Guidance.

Guide the people by law, subdue them by punishment, they may shun crime, but will be void of shame. Guide them by example, subdue them by courtesy, they will learn shame.—Confucius.

Family of Churchmen.

Rev. Samuel Skrene, vicar of Llanham, Nottinghamshire, England, has seven sons and they are all priests of the church.

Danderine

Grows Hair

and we can

PROVE IT!

The Great DANDERINE Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results.

It enlivens and invigorates the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, resulting in a continuous and increasing growth of the hair.

Letters of praise are continually coming in from nearly all parts of the country stating that Danderine has reversed the growth of hair in cases that were considered absolutely hopeless.

A lady from Brooklyn writes: "After a short trial my hair stopped falling, and I now have a lovely head of hair very heavy and over one and a quarter parts long."

Danderine stimulates the scalp, makes it healthy and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp invigorator known. It is a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a small bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

Now on sale at every drug and toilet store in the land; 3 sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

To show how quickly Free Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to: Keweenaw Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and the in silver or stamp to pay postage.
